Problem 1. Are the two triangles similar?

Solution:  $\angle BAC = \angle B'A'C' = 60^\circ$ . The ratio  $\frac{8}{4}$  is the same as  $\frac{6}{3}$ . Therefore the two triangles are similar because  $\angle AC = \angle B'A'C'$  and the including sides are proportional.

EMILY DICKINSON

IN CASE OF FIRE THROW THIS IN.

September 1959

We're back !!! As we entered, we realized that we were not returning as first graders, or freshmen, but seniors.

Marching down the auditorium aisles further deepened this sense of superiority. Henry Wilson, the Student Council President opened the first assembly before Mr. Peck and Mr. Colamonico delivered their welcoming speeches. Upon returning to our homerooms we noticed that the Main Office and Mr. Nelson's office were swarming with confusion. The familiar halls echoed the first-day excitement, while a few seniors were guiding students to the newly-numbered rooms.

Hennis O'Day and Luis De Cara were always on hand to enlighten the school day with stories of their experiences in Germany and Argentina, while Helaine Chatiger and Delbert Meyerhoefer told of the riots had at Girls' and Boys' State.

Soon the senior magazine sale swung into full session. Knuckle-worn and weary, Elaine Juliano topped the salesmen.

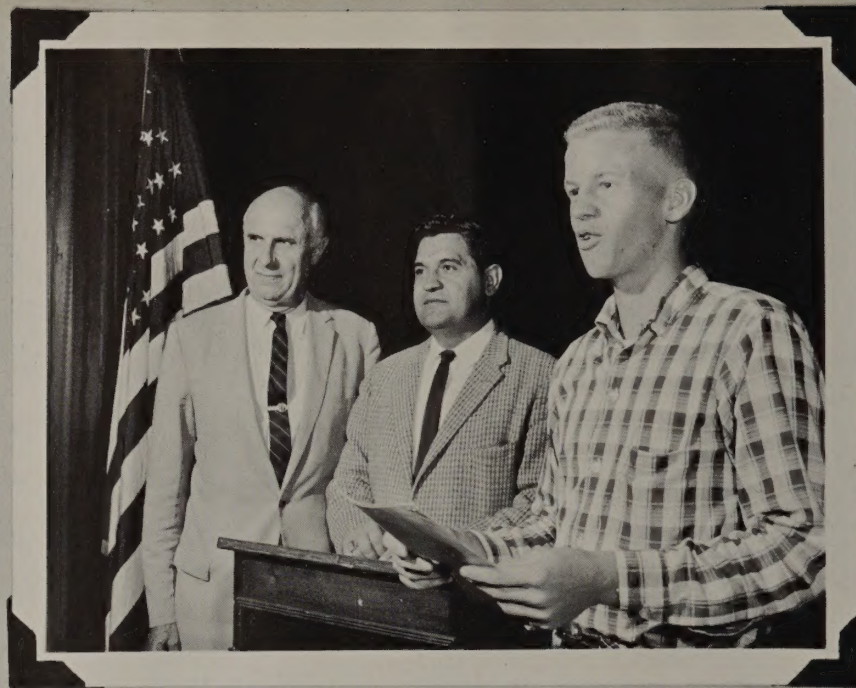

Our magazine battle over, the war cry moved to the athletic field. With six seniors, Mackey, Graovac, Richardson, Kader, Wilson and Towns, the harriers' only loss was to Lancaster.

September also brought two victories for Varsity Football and one loss for the J.V.'s.

October 1959

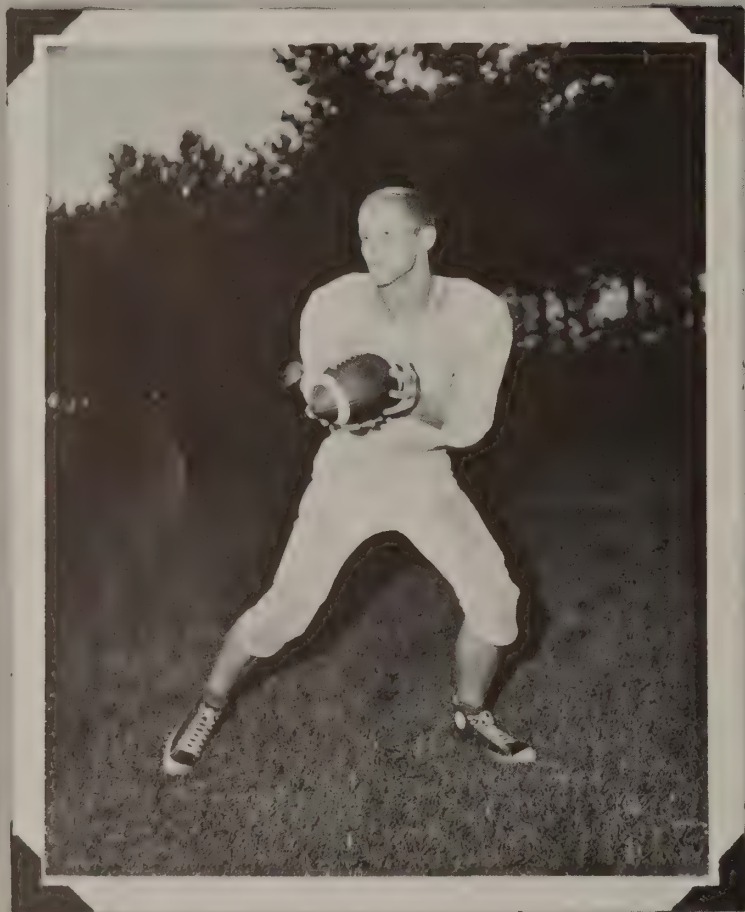

The gridiron action really paid off. Through soaring summer temperatures and drizzling autumn days, the boys practiced with Coach Pacini. Days went by quickly for senior linemen Rayeur, Brockman, Overhoff, Zittel, Andres, Bradley and Carpenter as they pushed against the 7-man sled. The senior backfielders, O'Day, Age, Williams, Shamblen, Hill and Meyerhoefer built up their appetites by practicing aerial attacks. The raiders played seven games, resulting in a 6-1 record with Sweethome, Ilroquois, Lake Shore, Cheektowaga, Gowanda, Alden and Sloan. The cheerleaders bounced around displaying their undeveloped talents.

Meanwhile back on the home front, activities were popping. Student Council projects began early. President Henry Wilson played host to an area conference. "That, me worry?" was the name of the senior Halloween window painting, which after we worked so industriously on, was disqualified. However, it is rumored other classes conformed to the strict rules and somebody won.

Bobbie Burns entertained us in mid-October with his conception of poetry at our first paid assembly. The ham activities of October concluded with the mugging of the seniors for the yearbook.

November 1959
November brought Japanese Holiday, the Sophomore Hop. Busily, the class assembled Oriental lanterns. Bill Enser, class president, and his fellow masculine heroes refereed the hair pulling of the squaking, stubborn females during dance preparations.

All the boys remember only too well the night of Friday, the 13th. the Sadie Hawkins Dance! With freedom snatched away at ten P.M., "Marriyin' Sam," the idol of many shrews performed the weddings before the crescent trimmed out house. Student Council's main project, money for the Foreign Exchange Program, wasn't half as messy a task as that of the morning following the dance. The council on bended knees, begged both the town and classes to support the program.

Music during November was at its finest with concerts galore. "King Conklin," heading the brass section of the senior band and directing the training band, made the horns really toot. The orchestra showing commendable improvement, and the Junior High Boys' Chorus kept Mr. Meacham out of trouble. The Senior Band again competed at Fredonia under the direction of Mr. Downey. Both choruses, with Mrs. Gangi, brought the Christmas spirit near. November also brought a full schedule of indoor girls' intramurals.

December 1959

December was a month of festivities! Through the Art Department and the skills of the teachers, the building was overflowing with Christmas ornaments. The nativity scene also reflected the feeling of the season. Snow, real, yet scarce, added a touch to the excitement.

The Boosters swinging affair came first. The singing of Christmas carols to organ music high-lighted the dance. Using the same decorations of the rotating buggy and candle-lit tables, the Juniors held their Holiday Hop the following week.

Meanwhile, the toys rolled in. From the daily pleas and threats of force from Mr. Heiss, dolls and trucks of childhood days were mournfully relinquished over to the towering brute.

As the customary relationship between that of Christmas and children grew, we realized the presence of younger students. The Junior High assembly, produced by Mr. Sutkowski's sixth grade, turned the spotlight over to our younger immature sisters and brothers - also a part of E. C. S.

The twenty-second, and the release from jail, brought the Senior's version of 'Twas the Night Before Christmas. It certainly was the coolest for the Senior High, but for Butch Brockman, the wettest!

January 1960

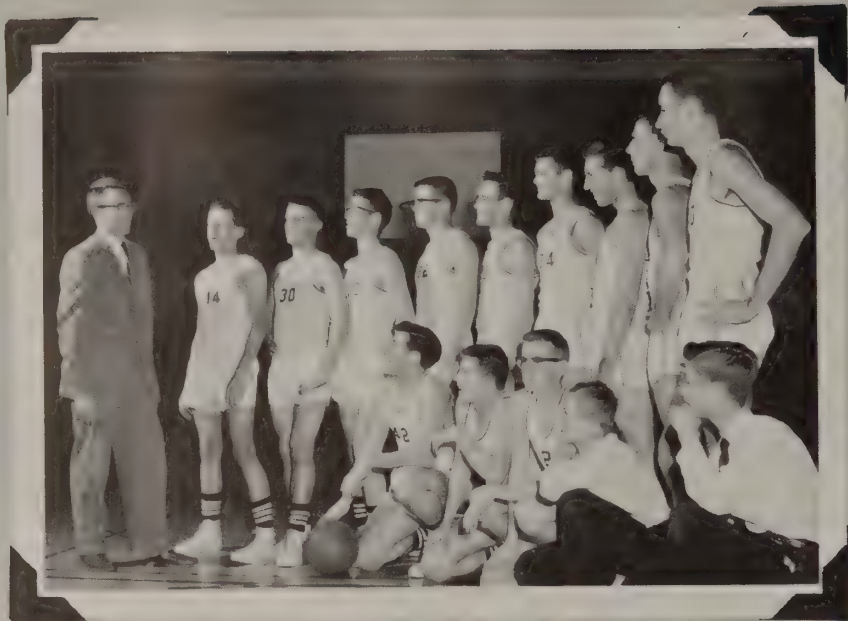

Horror - exams! That an ugly shadow clung over our impish minds. For in all classes - math, science, English, and history, the red pencil appeared. While most teachers became more irritable with the approaching event of the two and three hour exams, others decided there must be easier ways to live. Mr. Lindeisen, Mr. Morse, and Mr. Hildenstein filled the empty, undesired positions.

Persian Mist, the plain, simple, Junior Prom, climaxed exam week. Queen Marion and her court spotlighted the evening and the morning after. Through the evening petty inter-class fights, usually characteristic of all Juniors, were abandoned - thanks to President Marjorie Guenther.

January's social schedule was busy and varied. In the cultural line, "Beauty and the Beast" filled us with a warm glow - usually called pride. It was encouraging to know that a student cast could do as well as Broadway pros. The cast quite loyally claimed that Mr. Kurbacki and Mr. Gridley were responsible for the success.

Basketball brought five wins. Coach Schmidt and Senior giants Towns, Rayner, Day, Brockman, Agle, and De Cara, led the team. As usual, the Athletic Council provided honor jackets for the Varsity Club.

"Now THIS IS GOOD"

February 1960

With February came the false impression that we could relax. Exams were over and now the going would be easy again. Ha! Soon the realization came that our first semester loafing was to be rewarded with second semester drudgery.

Our new and heavy work load was made easier, though, by the excitement of two new sports. Wrestling had begun and the Williams brothers (alias Galliger brothers) were bringing glory to E.C.S. Skiing was also going at full speed. The snow, though it proved to be an obstacle to our faithful busdrivers, was perfect for the skiers.

Besides athletic glory, Eden was overflowing with scholastic triumph. Eileen Anderson, David Walker, Richard Koubek and Don Williams won Regents Scholarships. Because of the extra interest in mind improvement, the library was crowded with earnest students.

All this burning energy caused an increase in appetite so the cafeteria staff fed us especially well.

Then we finally realized that school was for working, we became more observant of the study habits of the sixth, seventh, and eighth grades. Thanks to their able teachers, they were doing fine.

March 1960

Freshmen galore! With every school there always seems to be those "monsters" to contend and live with. Elerb monitors screamed orders at the unruly juveniles; court sessions were jammed with the delinquent Freshmen. Their talents (?) were also displayed at their dance.

Signs of Spring kept popping out and then disappearing. This raised great enthusiasm in both the Agriculture and Homemaking Departments where preparations were being made for spring planting and Easter dresses, etc.

The teachers, too, were affected by the promise of Spring. Gray, tired, automatic smiles were replaced with bright, new expressions.

As usual, spring fever was being spread throughout the students. It became difficult to concentrate and most of the student body was subject to spells of daydreaming.

The basketball season closed in the earlier part of the month with an eleven-seven record, giving the Raiders third place in Division III. Sparkling blue-eyed Dick Towns scored seventh highest among the many basketball players in the county.

April 1960

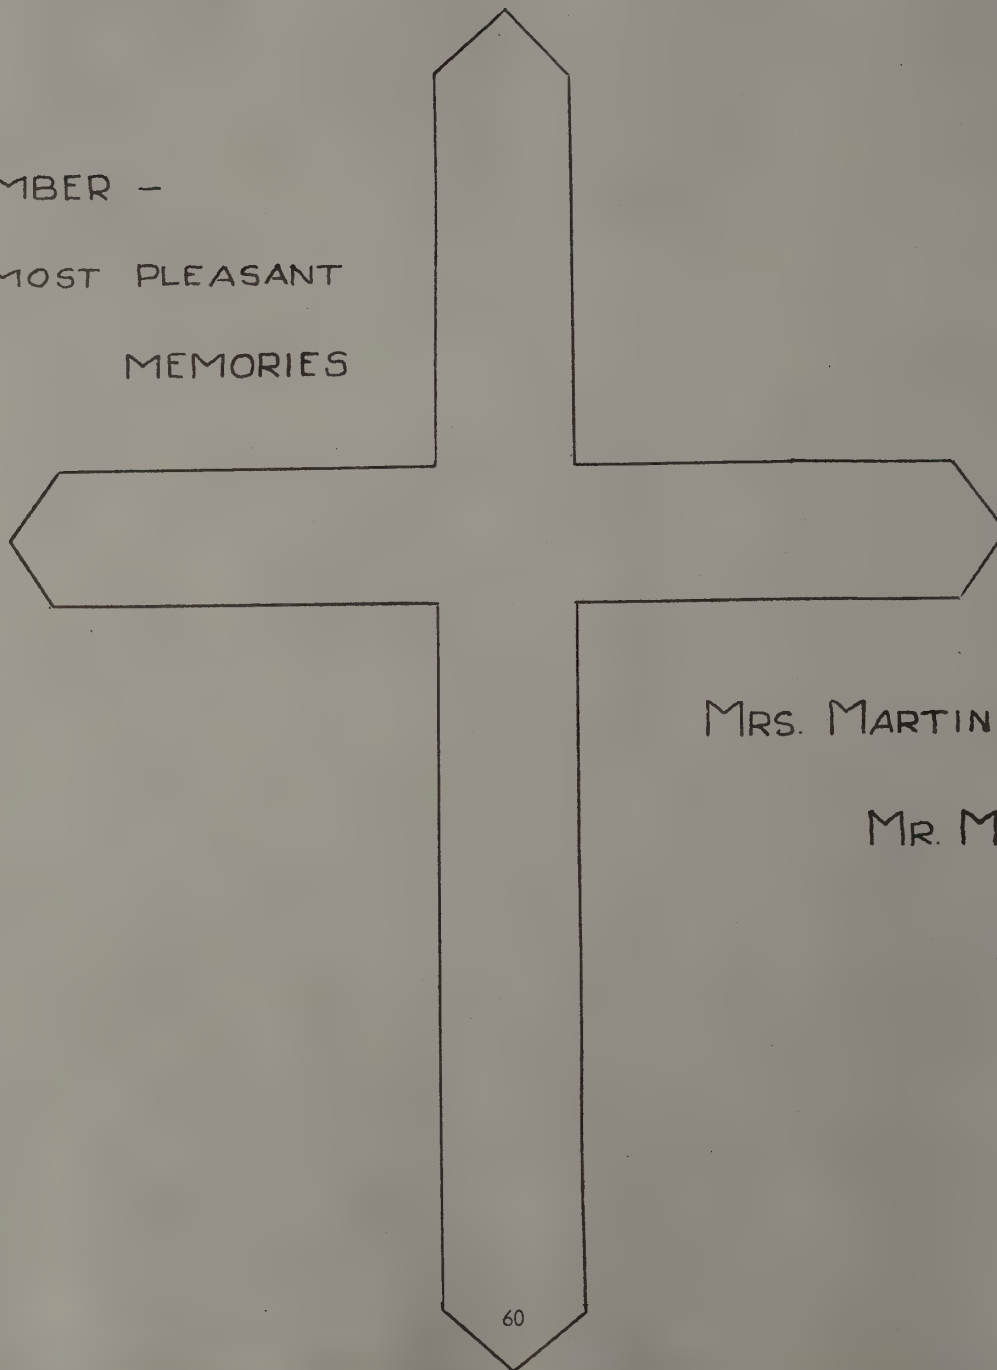

In April, scholarship instead of virtue was rewarded. National Honor Society, represented in speeches by Dennis O'Day, Lelaine Phatiger, Eileen Anderson and Barbara Maren, installed three more seniors and eleven juniors into their ranks. The beautiful white candles revealed both the joy of the new members and the envy of the untouched as the rewards of scholarships, leaderships, character and service were plainly visible.

Memories were beginning to float back. All of us were secretly wondering how the teachers had tolerated us through our varying and obnoxious stages. The victor in the struggle seemed to be Mr. Varco. All year he stuck to his guns, or shall we say books, and pounded knowledge into our thick skulls. When other people who were associated with us were admittedly insane, he still refrained from pulling out all of his hair (at least in public.) And so, because of his patience, understanding, and teaching ability, we dedicate our Yearbook to him. Poor soul !!!

May and June 1960
All sentimentality was abandoned in the rush to get out of school. Everyone was looking forward to new jobs, summer loafing and the prospect of a college education. No one had time to think of school anymore and June exams, we are afraid, took a somewhat backward position in our minds.

In May the Junior High Band and the Choruses competed at Fredonia and Amherst. As usual, Eden came back with honors.

The Athletic Association caused quite a bit of enthusiasm at their annual banquet honoring our athletes. The chests of the athletes were all swelled with manly pride only to be excelled by the unnaturally stiff posture of their once athletic fathers.

In June the minds and hearts of the Seniors were devoted to graduation. Our Ball, of course, climaxed thirteen years of school social activities and therefore overshadowed the interest in the Varsity Club Dance.

Realizing that this is the end of our Embers, we mournfully hand over our "Den" to the Juniors! Live it up as we have, dear underclassmen, and have fun with your yearbook. He will be watching you —

All our love,

Janes

Jane,
Best of luck to a swell Spanish class.
nite. ~~Good~~ luck
Clark

Jane,
There's really not much to say except theory is over. Anything I want to tell you I say on the Phone.

Take care of you know who.

Always,
Nancy

Jane,
Here's wishing you pass
your exams this June.
Hope you are in some of my classes next year.

Lelia
